WOMAN'S COLLEGE CELEBRATES 60th BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Woman's College observed her sixtieth birthday anniversary Monday, October 6, with the annual pilgrimage to the grave of Dr. Charles D. McIver in the morning and the Founder's Day Program in Aycock Auditorium from 8 to 8:30 p. m. that night.

Student leaders and college officials made the traditional pilgrimage to Dr. McIver's grave at Green Hill Cemetery at 9:30 a. m. Chancellor Edward Kidder Graham paid tribute to the founder and first president of the college. A wreath was placed at the grave and smaller nosegays were placed upon the five other graves in the McIver family plot.

Those making the pilgrimage in addition to Chancellor Graham were: Miss Katherine Taylor, dean of students; Miss Ione Grogan, alumnae representative; Miss Cora Strong, Miss Annie Petty and Miss Mary Petty, former faculty members; and Betty (Brown) Jester, alumnae secretary. Student representatives included: Trilby Boerner, president of Student Government; Louise Brown, commercial class; Martie Ann Cope, sophomore class president; Betsy Swain (daughter of Virginia [Sloan] Swain '28), freshman class; Rosemond Farrah, junior class president; and Lydia Moody, senior class president.

Following the ritual, the group returned to the Alumnae House for coffee, where Mrs. Graham, Miss Pearl Wyche '03 of Greensboro and Nettie (Parker) Wirth '03 of Raleigh joined them.

Prior to the evening program in Aycock, the Guilford County Chapter served a buffet dinner at the Alumnae House. Speakers and guests introduced at the meal were: Dr. and Mrs. E. K. Graham, Dr. and Mrs.

Agnes Scott Honors Woman's College Alumna With Endowment of Museum

The Mary Stuart MacDougall Museum, endowed by alumnae, faculty friends and the college in honor of the retiring head of the biology department, was dedicated during the 63rd commencement at Agnes Scott College this spring. Dr. George Hugh Boyd, University of Georgia, made the principal address.

Dr. MacDougall of '03 (Woman's College) was professor of biology at Agnes Scott for 32 years, is the author of a successful textbook and many research articles and was Atlanta's Woman of the Year in Education in 1943.

FOUNDER'S DAY ADDRESS

by LUTHER H. HODGES

Delivered in Aycock Auditorium October 6, 1952, at 8 p. m.

I consider it a very high honor indeed to be asked to talk to the students and alumnae of Woman's College on this your sixtieth birthday. It is a high honor to join with Dr. Logan Wilson, vice president of the University of North Carolina, who talked to you last year, and your own Chancellor Edward K. Graham, who spoke to you in celebrating Founder's Day of this great school. I am a businessman who is interested in public service and I should like to talk briefly about a few things that are on my mind. When I was a senior at the University in Chapel Hill in 1919, I applied for a Rhodes scholarship. I asked one of my English professors if he would recommend my appointment. He said he was against my getting the appointment as it might take me away permanently from North Carolina and he felt that within thirty years North Carolina would be a great and growing state and would need all the young men it could find to stay in the State and help. I am now trying to follow his advice. I'm passing that advice on to you. North Carolina needs trained leaders such as you.

As I have been around North Carolina during the last few months (and I have been in every county) I have found people confused and discouraged. Many of them have lost confidence in their leaders. I recall in my own little campaign that it was very difficult for me to ask the first person for support. I finally spoke to a waitress in a coffee shop, telling her that I had never run for office before and that I would like for her to vote for me. I was nervous and started to walk away, not waiting to hear her reply. You will be interested in what she had to say. She spoke to me rather calmly and said, "Mr., I am for you because you ain't in Raleigh or Washington now." If her remark did not have serious connotations it would be funny; however, she expresses the point of view of too many persons in North Carolina and throughout America. This lack of confidence and the prevalent criticism against public officials are overdone, but that does not change the seriousness of the situation.

I recall being at a meeting in New York when Mr. Winston Churchill came back from his speech-making tour where he had coined the phrase "behind the Iron Curtain." He said to us that day, "This is one of the greatest crises in the history of the world. The world needs leadership, and needs it badly. God grant that America may have the willingness and the moral courage to assume the responsibility of the world." This great soldier and orator knew what had happened to the fine peoples of Germany, Italy, Japan, and other nations whose leaders had taken them astray under the pretense of building for them a greater nation. You and I know what has happened in various parts of the world where individuals with a lust for power and glory have given the wrong kind of leadership.

I talked with a teacher who has turned industrialist, and incidentally is a good one, and I asked him if he did not think that the peoples in North Carolina as well as elsewhere were more concerned about our international and national leadership than they were with the every day things that are happening to us here in our State. He agreed wholeheartedly and said that until we can have leadership in the nation and the world in which we can have confidence that we will still remain confused and discouraged even at the local level.

We are all working under the tension which springs from this confusion and discouragement. Our tension now is increased by the uncertainty of what Russia will or will not do and the present reaction of peoples in under-developed areas of the world who have lived under colonialism and who don't like the treatment they have received in the past.

I do not want to seem too serious and I do not want to get you further discouraged. I am simply trying to have us look at what has gone before and what is happening now so that we may plan for a better future. I am not as discouraged as some people were a century or more ago, for example:

In 1848 Lord Shaftesbury said: "Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck." In 1849 Disraeli said: "In industry, commerce, and agriculture there is no hope." In 1852 the dying Duke of Wellington said: "I thank God I shall be spared from seeing the consummation of the ruin that is gathering around us." Even in 1801 Wilberforce said: "I dare not marry, the future is so uncertain," and in 1806 the great William Pitt said: "There is scarcely anything around us but ruin and despair."

There is renewed interest in world affairs on the part of the average individual, and there is a healthy dissatisfaction with old leaders. I think you will have noticed this in the last few months with the nominees of the two great political parties. They are new faces. They are honest men. It is also exemplified in the defeat of quite a few old-time politicians in the various states. I hope there will be more of it, particularly in places where the politicians have not been honest and straightforward.

I want to say to you students and alumnae that it is entirely in our hands to make a better world if we are willing to think and act simply and do our individual parts. You and I must assume responsibility for our politics and for our government. We have abdicated too long. The speed at which we are moving and the demands for our time and our interests are making us abdicate in so far as the training of our children is concerned. We are leaving too much to the schools and to social institutions. We are trying so hard to keep up with the Joneses that we are forgetting some of the simple fundamentals that made our country great and that gave us the heritage that we now enjoy.

I am terribly concerned as are many of you with our lack of teachers and especially with our lack of good teachers who put the interest of the children first. I do not know the answer. I am trying to learn and I urge you to do likewise. You who are listening tonight are in a position to urge people to get into the teaching profession. Many of you are in it. The compensation for teachers has improved and I hope will improve still more to the point where a person who is interested in teaching and rendering a service will not have to make too much of a sacrifice to enter the profession and stay in it! Won't you begin thinking about this problem as many of you have already done and help out wherever you can? It may be that some of the regulations regarding teacher certification ought to be changed. It may be that there are other things we ought to do, but the importance of the child is so great that it leaves a responsibility with you and me to do whatever is necessary.

Won't you also begin to think about your responsibility as to voting and as to getting others to vote? You will recall how much was said at the time women were given the vote as to how much women would help in government and how much they would increase the voting. Even though the public does not realize it fully enough, you have done a lot of fine things since you were given the ballot. However, a recent editorial which I am quoting is rather significant:

"In 1948, for instance, only 51 per cent of the people in this country eligible to vote did so. But in 1948 in Italy 89 per cent of the eligibles voted. In England last year the figure was 83 per cent. The year before in Belgium it was 90 per cent. In Canada, 75 per cent of the eligibles voted in 1949. In Sweden last year it was 80 per cent.

"Furthermore, our voting record has been getting worse for about the last three-quarters of a century. In 1880, for instance, 78.4 per cent of the eligibles in this country voted. It had dropped to 73.5 per cent in 1900. When women voted for the first time in 1920 it dropped to what must have been an all-time low of 49.3 per cent."

You cannot do your job as a citizen — you cannot satisfy your conscience any more by saying you will keep "hands off" politics. You betray the leadership of the institution under whose auspices we are talking tonight if you do not assume your responsibility. You received certain training and values from this institution and I would like to quote from Chancellor Graham's references two years ago as to values your college has given you:

"Truth and the love of truth, justice, tolerance, the discipline of free men and women, self-reliance, independence of spirit, the habit and the pride of responsibility, faith in human dignity and progress, belief in God."

These same values are necessary to restore this country to the position it ought to hold. Certainly these and similar values are necessary if we are to successfully lead the world out of the confusion and difficulty in which it finds itself today. This is your country and mine — let's not give it away or weaken it. Let's restore it and clean it again. Let's not leave it to leaders who may again lead us astray. Let's assume the responsibility ourselves and in the assuming of same we will develop leaders. It is up to us.

We can remember with Longfellow:

"Not in the clamor of the crowded street,
Not in the shouts and plaudits of the throng,
But in ourselves are triumph and defeat."

Thank you for the privilege of talking to you. Good night.

ALEXANDER H. GIRARD JUDGES TEXTILE SHOW

The eighth International Textile Exhibition displayed scores of new designs in eight classes of fabrics during November at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

Purchase awards from $20 to $250 totaled more than $2,000.

Alexander H. Girard, architect and fabric designer of Grosse Point, Mich., judged entries on September 29 before the exhibition was set up.

Held at Woman's College since it was started, the exhibition this year was under joint auspices of the Department of Art and the School of Home Economics.

Fabrics exhibited were in these classifications: woven rugs, woven clothing fabrics, printed clothing fabrics, woven drapery, printed drapery, woven upholstery, printed upholstery, and woven and printed table linens in any material.

The top purchase award of $250 was for the best woven rug. Purchases remained in the college's extensive collection.

Girard, a graduate of the Royal Institute of British Architects, the Royal School of Architecture in Rome, and New York University, is widely known for his work in architecture and in the field of textile design. His work in this field includes the Uzielli Apartment in Florence, Italy; structures for the Ford Motor Company in Detroit, and many fine private homes. He has won special awards in the architectural field. He won honors for his work in the Museum of Modern Art Fabric Competition. He is a member of the American Institute of Architects and the American Designers Institute.

Recently, Girard completed designs for a complete fabric line for a Michigan furniture company. His work has been exhibited in London, New York, Detroit, Rochester, and Cranbrook Academy.

1900 Student Body Picture Presented To Woman's College Library

A framed picture of the student body of 1900-1901 at the Woman's College has recently been made a gift to the Woman's College Library for permanent record.

The picture was given by Mrs. George A. Hoyle of Shelby. She was the former Lucy Baber from Belwood, a student at the college in 1900-1901, and lived in the "Davis House" next door to Dr. Joyner's home.

Around the World With '51

From the U. S. to Alaska, to the Bavarian Alps, to Venezuela and to France journeyed four members of the Class of 1951 last fall. These world travelers recount some of their experiences, Helen Emily Miller from Alaska, Betsy Haley from Germany, Peggy Jansen from Venezuela and Joan Austin from France.

ESKIMO ORPHANS

The Moravian Children's Home is an orphanage which is located about 20 miles east of Bethel, Alaska, near the village of Kwethluk. Travel to the Home is done by plane all year around, or dog team in the winter, and on the Kuskokwim River in the summer. Most of the children are orphans. Some are sent by the Welfare Department and the Alaska Native Service.

At the present time, there are 37 children in our care. It is my work to teach the fourth through the eighth grades following the standards and requirements as set forth by the Territorial Department of Education. Examinations are given by the department to those students completing the eight years of study. All must take these before they can be admitted to a higher grade of study. My teaching supplies are more than adequate and most of our texts are new editions. No outside assignments are made, so all study is confined to the daily classes.

The staff has charge of teaching activities such as sewing, cooking, knitting, crafts, dramatics, and choir during the early evening hours in the winter. The children choose their own activity. The older girls are quite active in 4-H club work of which I am their local leader.

The boys have a scout troop which they enjoy very much.

I am here as a teacher for the Moravian Church for a period of three years. My work is just thrilling and there is no time for dull moments with these little lively Eskimos. I enjoy the things they do, and especially some of their favorite sports such as tobogganing, ball games, and playing in the snow. A ride by dog sled is lots of fun too. The "Huskies" are well-trained and it is a pleasure to see them work together in pulling the sleds.

Santa Claus was so generous to the children and they wrote him for the same things that children at home do—such as cowboy outfits, cap pistols, marbles, dolls, airplanes, cars and trucks, and numerous other toys. It was fun helping to fill so many stockings and then giving out toys from under the tree. All day of Christmas toys were played with, compared, and exchanged among the children.

BAVARIAN ALPS

I am living in Murnau, Germany, a small town in the Bavarian Alps, only a few miles from the Austrian, Swiss, or Italian border. My position is one of a Recreational Director for the Special Services, Department of Army. The European Command has its Engineer School here and I, with the help of two other American girls, plan and direct the recreation in the Service Club. Our facilities include a club with a large lounge, crafts room, photo lab, ping-pong and pool rooms, Snack Bar, and a small lounge. Our weekly schedules include cash quizzes, song fests, ski tours, photo contests, all kinds of stunt nights, dances, and parties.

Betsy Haley In The Alps

I live with the two American girls, two French girls, and an English girl in a big house with plenty of German maids. Our view from the house is one of a huge lake with the Alps in the background. I find myself being forced to learn to speak German so as to be able to understand a few things going on around and to ask a few sensible questions. The Germans put us to shame by picking up English so quickly.

These two pictures are some of the many I took in Garmisch, the scene of the Olympic Ski and Skating Trials. This sports center is only five miles away so you can imagine where I spend all my time off. By the way, I'm becoming quite a skier—there's hope, anyway.

I'm becoming more convinced every day of how lucky I am to be an American woman; these German women have failed to train their men and now they have to do all the work for the family. Just kidding, but it is surprising to note the views of men toward the women in this country.

I hope you can read between the lines and know how much I am enjoying being over here and though I miss W.C. I would not have missed this trip for the "world".

SOUTH OF THE BORDER

I'm living here with my father who is with the Shell Venezuelan Oil Company. Maracaibo is a wonderful place and I love it. You meet almost every nationality not only among the oil people but in Maracaibo itself as well. We have a lot of old family friends here, and many friends from my father's University days. Through him of course I have met people and seen places I perhaps otherwise would not have met or seen.

I have two jobs and in spite of the load of that I love them both. Mondays through Fridays I am with the Shell Caribbean Petroleum Company British School where I am part-time secretary for the supervisor of the Shell Senior Staff Schools in Venezuela, Colombia, and Trinidad and also for the Headmaster here; and substitute teacher and part-time art teacher. Since January I've been teaching half-days regularly in the first grade, or what we here call "First Form."

We have English, Dutch, Swiss, Venezuelan, and Colombian children in the school. Some, upon arrival, speak no English, and almost all speak no Spanish. Often we keep a running commentary in three languages, English, Dutch, and Spanish of arithmetic or reading lessons. Don't get me wrong though, my Spanish is still pretty bad but I did learn how to add in Spanish as well as say the necessary words to keep a class quiet.

It's amazing how fast these same children pick up both languages, any language, as a matter of fact. Some of these English and Spanish speaking children have picked up a good deal of Dutch from their Dutch friends. In three months they can follow school work in English without too much trouble.

Winter Shots At Garmisch—Scene Of The Olympic Ski And Skating Trials

The working hours are wonderful, I really must tell you about them. We start at 7:30 a.m. and go till 11 a.m. at which time we go home for dinner and "Siesta" till 1:30 p.m. Then we go again till 3:00. Later on in the afternoons we have the meetings of "Girl Guides" (English Girl Scouts), the Cubs, swimming classes and sports of some sort, something different planned for each afternoon.

My other job is teaching an Arts and Crafts course at the American School in Maracaibo on Saturday mornings. I have a grand group of kids from grade 3 through grade 8 divided into 3 groups, and I love this job as well. The American school, "Escuela Bella Vista" is a beautiful two year old very modern building—a delight to work in. Their teachers are American and Venezuelan and their children vary in nationality almost as much as those in the Shell school, "Escuela Las Delicias".

Education has progressed rapidly in the last 15 years. Considering that under the Dictator Gomez practically nothing was done to educate the people, the recent progress is remarkable and certainly hard to beat.

My free time is spent mostly at the swimming pool under the palm trees. Each oil company has its own club and pool but we go to the other company pools as well.

Evenings are really crammed with all kinds of planned club programs such as square dancing, Scottish dancing, just plain dancing, Bingo parties, not to mention the big dances a couple of times a year, and our own impromptu activities. Never a dull moment! We have a Choral Society, and a drama group, "The Maracaibo Players".

My unusual experiences are many and run from flying a private DC-3 with me at the controls 4000 ft. up in the air, to an ordinary trip down town through the narrow one way little streets and into the "market" where a woman alone doesn't feel too comfortable. Keeping an eagle eye out for insects and snakes is part of the everyday routine, and killing scorpions comes under that heading.

Most houses here are equipped with running water and lights, but not all with screens. All the company houses are required to have screens, thank goodness, because between the millions of flies and little lizards and spiders chasing after the flies the houses would be zoos. The city health department has a very efficient DDT squad which goes from house to house spraying the entire inside and out twice a year. Even the poorest little Indian shack made of cardboard and orange crates has the little notice painted on the outside, DDT and then the date.

LA BELLE FRANCE

I am studying at the Université de Grenoble—a special course for foreign students at the faculté des lettres. This course consists principally of classes in French literature, in vocabulary, in grammar, translation, and pronunciation, with a bit of French culture thrown in for good measure. Most of the courses are lecture type, conducted in an amphitheater, with no student discussion in connection —especially those for the French students. Here at Grenoble classes generally meet only one time per week.

As concerns living conditions, I would say generally, that there is a housing problem in France. Apartments are difficult to find and quite expensive from the French point of view, although when translated into dollars, the price is not so high as that in the USA. Good rooms are also at a premium. I myself had no difficulty in finding room and board with a French family at only a block and a half's distance from the faculté des lettres. The people with whom I live are really a grand bunch: Monsieur and Madame, two small girls, plus numerous friends of the family who are constantly dropping in. I am not sure that their friendliness and almost instantaneous acceptance of us (there is another American girl here for her junior year from Sarah Lawrence College) within the family circle is typical of all the French families accepting foreigners as boarders. Some of my friends here and level than in the majority of the schools in the United States. The schools generally do not have mixed education until the university level. And it is there that more leniency is found. One need never go to class if he feels that he can pass the exams (written and oral) without attending them. The work is far more specialized than in the American University, but it is rather like the graduate school of which it is the rough equivalent. There is no general education program there corresponding to our freshman-sophomore program. That is to be found more in the lycee, although that too is specialized according to the interests of the pupil or the profession he hopes to follow. There is a Classics series, a Modern, a Technical.

The university student inscribes in the particular faculté in which he is interested: letters, law, science, medicine, polytechnique, art, etc., and his education is generally confined to that particular field.

Travelling third class on the European trains presents some unusual and interesting situations, particularly if one does not understand the language, as was the case when I was in Italy during the Christmas vacation. Likewise, the traffic can give rise to amusing situations. I can happily report I have been run into by bicycles three times now.

There are some things which require a bit of adjustment to other than taking baths only once a week, having no central heat in the homes, and never seeing refrigerator advertisements. Among these are eating a huge midday meal, dining at 8:00 or 8:30 at night, and smoking Gauloises, a combination of the finest rabbit tobacco available, it would seem. At least the taste is nothing like that of the American cigarette—much stronger. However, now I can not stand the flavor of a Lucky or Pall Mall, and besides they cost 200 francs a pack or about 57 or 58 cents.

To stick in a word about French fashions, I can only say they ain't for students. Clothing in general is much more expensive than in the U. S. Here in Grenoble, however, that does not make too much difference. Sports clothes are the order of the day, and people go everywhere in them—even to concerts. Ski pants and after-ski boots constitute the classroom uniform of the bulk of the foreign students if not the French.

elsewhere in France have not found it easy.

One remark I might insert here concerns politesse française. I have definitely encountered extremes, and the younger generation (particularly at the university level) suffering in the comparison. If you encounter a group of fellows coming down the sidewalk, you are the one who hops (or are shoved) into the gutter. Likewise, chivalry has long been buried when it comes to getting on or off a bus or train. There it is chacun pour soi, and fear not the best man will win.

Further regarding the position of women, the French girl, or the well-bred one, at least, has less freedom than her counterpart in America. She is seldom allowed to go out unchaperoned until she is 20 or 21, and even then the dating pattern is quite different from our own. There are relatively few women in high-ranking government positions. However, many of them own and operate their own little shops—clothing, sports goods, novelties and what not.

Education in general is far more difficult here at the primary and secondary

Professor Macauley Has First Novel Published

By Susan Robinson

Robie Macauley, assistant professor of English at Woman's College, whose first novel, "The Disguises of Love," was published November 3 by Random House, discusses his book with quiet enthusiasm.

The author describes it as a domestic novel with a university background, concerning a professor's family. "Not this university," he added.

He has had a number of articles published in literary magazines, mostly fiction, with a few literary criticisms. Asked if actually sitting down to write a book and getting it finished wasn't awfully hard work, he replied that it wasn't if one was really interested in what he was doing. But he admitted that he wrote pretty steadily for six months. He is now working on a book of short stories.

Some of his short stories have been reprinted in the O. Henry Prize Stories collection and the Best American Short Stories volumes. He wrote the critical introduction for the reissue of Ford Madox Ford's Parade's End and in 1949 won the Furioso fiction award.

Mr. Macauley majored in the classics in college. He was graduated from Kenyon College with the A.B. Degree and received the M.F.A. Degree from the University of Iowa.

After serving four years in the Army, he taught at Bard College and the University of Iowa before coming to Woman's College three years ago.

Mr. Macauley thinks reading and writing is the best training for writers. He teaches creative writing and freshman English at Woman's College.

Miss Jenkins is of the class of '35 at Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

From State Normal to The Yearling

by GWEN HAMER '53

The "what if" process of evaluation is none too reliable, but it is useful at times. What if, for instance, the idea of student government had proved as impracticable as it probably seemed to those nearsighted sceptics who are always present at the birth of an act of faith. What if the act of faith upon which the Student Government Association was founded had come somehow too soon or too late, and because the time was out of joint had lost its vitality, its poignant meaning. Obviously what we now know as Student Government would never have lived to grow into the structure whose upkeep and preservation keynote this conference.* But behind the successful formulation and execution of every worthwhile idea there must be a background which gives promise of fulfillment. Ideas must be given voice and discussed and broadened to become effective. Communication through publication is as necessary to the life of an idea as breathing to things human.

The need for a medium of creative expression on this campus was felt even before the college issued her first diplomas. In March 1897, five years after the founding of the North Carolina State Normal and Industrial School, the State Normal Magazine began publication. From this not-so-humble beginning, for the magazine would have been a credit to a much older college, came the Carolinian and the Coraddi, which were and still are in many respects two sides of the same coin, and the inspiration for Pine Needles. The magazine was published quarterly from October to June by a board of editors elected from the Adelpian and Cornelian Literary Societies under the direction of a managing editor from and chosen by the faculty. The first issue featured an article by Dr. McIver on "Our Educational Advance," and it contained an editorial which commented on collegiate, local, national, and world affairs; a number of poems and sketches; and a commentary on contemporary literary work. In the years between 1897 and 1919, the magazine continued to serve every imaginable literary purpose. It published formal and informal essays, plays, marriage announcements, comments on the existence and contents of other college magazines, light and serious poetry, jokes . . . very proper ones, of course . . . and treatises of, for example, "The Prevention of Crime." The contributors were about as varied as the contributions. They included students, faculty, and prominent public figures.

By a process of evolution the managing editor became an advisory faculty board, and in 1914 the student editors assumed the complete responsibility of the magazine's publication. Finally the wagon began to crack under the load. The 1919 May-June issue carried this announcement from its editorial staff:

Beginning with the first number next year the magazine will bear a different name which we hope will be a more suggestive one than the purely practical commonsense one that we now have. Next year the magazine will not be hampered by having to have its editors devote so much time and energy to getting the local happenings recorded. The newspaper, the Carolinian, will have these matters up while they are fresh and the magazine will discuss only those vital ones of lasting interest. The newspaper will thus permit the magazine to devote more space to literary work.

Thus October 1919 saw the first issue of Coraddi. Although the magazine looked much the same and although it inherited old problems such as the repeated publication of a few contributors, a problem which every Coraddi editor ever since has known all too familiarly, an important decision had been made which would, in time, affect many changes. The magazine was thereafter to be a solely literary magazine. Gradually, it became better coordinated in tone and in appearance. The quality of its material improved, and after a few years the humorous section disappeared. During the thirties, Coraddi became a magazine written and edited competently by students. Art work was introduced, and pen and ink sketches, woodcuts, and photographs in increasing numbers added interest as well as a broadened point of view to the magazine. The cover lost its quarterly look and became bright and attractive. The years of real literary endeavor had begun. Under the influence of the excellent literary people who come to the campus to teach creative writing, the poems and short stories which Coraddi published became more and more outstanding, and set higher and higher standards for judging their successors. Today Coraddi is an expression of the best creative art fostered at Woman's College. She cherishes her high standards and she cherishes, too, her integrity . . . the integrity which comes from a realization of the high responsibility of art to the world outside itself.

In 1902 the Adelpian and Cornelian Societies under the guidance of Laura H. Coit, then secretary to President McIver, published the college's first annual. The Decennial contained a dedication to Dr. McIver, a history of the college, sections on the classes between 1893 and 1901, sections on the present classes, an art section, histories of the societies, sections on the departments and on organizations, sports sections, and a thorough sketch of Greensboro including comments to the effect that it possessed 42 district enterprises, 18 wholesale houses, 243 retail houses, 5 separate banking houses . . . assets $2,356,500, 5 first class hotels, 2 daily newspapers, and a climate that is "all that could be desired." The Decennial was discontinued in 1906 and continued again in 1909 under a new name,

The Carolinian. It carried a picture of the new McIver Memorial Building and this comment in its editorial: Through this medium we offer you a glimpse of our college life. The Carolinian featured baby pictures as well as current ones of the seniors, write-ups of special occasions during the year, now fascinating group pictures of the campus, and, interestingly enough, several short stories and poems.

The war numbered among its casualties the Carolinian. In 1919 the senior class compiled a scrapbook, "The Cardinal", to temporarily take its place. In 1920 the first Pine Needles was published, complete with dozens of senior superlatives and a senior class prophecy titled "Confessions of a Dope Fiend." Pine Needles passed from the hands of the senior class to those of an editor elected by the student body. It increased in length, width, and depth until in 1936 it reached its current size. Variety and clarity of focus have become its keynotes as it gives us truly "a glimpse of our college life."

In May 1919, the first editor of the college newspaper christened the Carolinian with a bottle of printer's ink and these comments:

Most first class colleges have college newspapers; it means that where there is a progressive spirit in a college, a newspaper is the natural outgrowth of the feeling of the necessity for expressing and boosting this exuberant spirit of growth . . . What we have needed has been a local newspaper to tell ourselves and others what we and our alumnae are doing. The possibilities of such a paper creating more loyal college spirit and for agitating and promoting progressive movements, is almost endless. Such a force we want our college newspaper to be.

A demand for the publication of a newspaper had been voiced among the students for at least a year, but war conditions made it impossible to secure paper. Finally the "exuberant spirit" of the college was given suitable expression. The Carolinian made its appearance. The news coverage was on the direct, personal side, but it included aspects of the state and national as well as collegiate scene. The paper carried personals, jokes, and a healthy number of ads as well as news and feature articles.

By 1921 its columns had been increased from 4 to 5 in number and had been lengthened from 12 inches in length to 15 inches. It was carrying calendar announcements, articles on activities at other colleges, humorous poetry, features from travelers abroad, and comments on political issues. During the summer of 1922, the Carolinian published its first Summer Issues. The fall of 1923 saw another increase in the size of the paper and 1924 saw yet another. 1924 saw, too, a decidedly improved coverage. The paper's columnists were informative and entertaining. It editors were crusading for the newly revised Student Government Association, and there was much talk about community government and responsible democracy. Letters to the editor were printed under the title "Campus Opinion." By the end of the thirties the Carolinian was the indispensable mouthpiece of student opinion which it is today. But today it is more than an automatic recording machine. Its editors in recent years have stressed that the Cary has a mind of its own. It is dedicated to certain high principles which have to do with responsible freedom. It is an invaluable ally and constructive critic of SGA, and it is an enemy-unto-death of student apathy.

The last student publication to appear upon the scene was The Yearling. The Yearling is a revival of the literary magazine, The Sample Case, which was published by the freshmen classes of 1929 and 1930. Launched in 1928 by a board of freshmen editors under the guidance of a group of faculty advisors, it has continued to interest its readers with short stories, poems, sketches, and research work.

The publications of the Woman's College were designed exclusively for her students. Their history echoes the history and traditions which students have made here. Their future prosperity will rest with the vision and with the faith which the students today and tomorrow lend them. And on their cementing supply of expressed ideas the security of the whole structure of SGA may well depend.

Population Report on Woman's College Alumnae

For the past seven years the Population Reference Bureau of Washington, D. C. has been making a study of the birth rate among college graduates, in which the Woman's College has participated. Each year colleges throughout the country send questionnaires to their tenth and twenty-fifth reunion classes, to discover the number or marriages and births in each class. The results are then compiled each June into an intercollegiate statistical comparison.

Our Alumnae Office has cooperated with the Bureau for the past two years, reviewing the classes of 1942 and 1941, and also 1927 and 1926.

Members of the class of 1942, surveyed through questionnaires this past winter, are carrying the baby banner with unusual zest. They report 1.22 children apiece, ten years after graduation. These show a considerable increase over the 1.12 babies each reported by our class of 1941 the previous year, and are an encouraging sign of an upward trend toward more babies in collegiate homes.

80% of our alumnae of 1942 have married by now, with an average of 1.52 infants per wife and 1.86 per mother.

Our '42' alumnae's average of 1.22 babies apiece just about equals the national average for the class of 1.23 infants each for the 131 colleges where the women were reviewed. The alumni of '42 from 121 colleges average 1.51 children apiece. Among the colleges where the alumni of the class were surveyed last winter, Brigham Young University, Utah, reported the most children, averaging 2.58 apiece. St. Xavier College, Ill., alumnae of '42 lead the women with 2.12 babies each.

Among our neighboring southern colleges, the University of South Carolina reports 1.15 children per alumnus of 1942, and 1.30 per alumna. Bennett averages only .80 of a child per alumna, and Guilford and High Point are also low with but .82 and .81 per alumna, respectively. Guilford men of the class report 1.09 infants apiece and High Point men average 1.10, while Meredith alumnae are relatively high with 1.25 offspring each. In Virginia, Randolph-Macon Woman's College averages 1.39 children per alumna and Sweet Briar women soar above the rest with 1.60 babies each!

But gloom is cast by reports from earlier classes. The Bureau estimates that 2.1 children are needed per graduate for a college class to replace itself. Reports from our class of 1927, 25 years after graduation when their families are nearly complete, are discouraging. The Woman's College alumnae of '27 average only 1.08 children apiece, even fewer than our class of '42 only ten years after graduation. '27 averages two children per mother, but even these just miss replacement, let alone compensate for the unmarried and childless members of the class. Our class of 1926, reviewed the previous year, did little better in its average family size, for they reported only 1.24 babies per alumna.

Other North Carolina colleges are also low, for Guilford reports 1.08 children per alumna of 1927; Meredith, 1.10, and High Point College only .90. The University of South Carolina averages 1.71 per alumnus and 1.59 per alumna, while Randolph-Macon Woman's College reports 1.23 infants per graduate of '27 and Sweet Briar alumnae average but 1.58. The national averages for 1927 are only 1.85 children per alumnus and 1.19 per alumna.

In these days of ever-increasing political and economic stress, our country's need for intelligent, trained leaders is being brought constantly to public attention. Eugenically and euthenically, college graduates are well above-average as parents, and it is vital for our nation's future that they give the next generation the advantage of their intelligence and intellectual training. Many excellent citizens will come from those who have not had the advantages of college education. As the same time, however, the educated group in this country should fulfill their duty to the nation by creating for tomorrow.

Nationwide reports from the classes of 1921-1927 show that 25 years after graduation they average only 1.78 children per alumnus and 1.27 per alumna. On the hopeful side is a progressive increase in family size found among the graduates of recent classes, 10 years after graduation. The trend is definitely upward, and reviews of the classes of 1936-1942 reveal that the '42 graduates studied last year can boast of 39% more infants apiece than could those of '36 at the corresponding time. For "college babies" are important. The children of college graduates, benefiting from their parents' intelligence and from the surroundings which the parents' college training can provide, are vitally needed for our country's future.

Lettie Rogers '40 Writes Third Novel

Lettie Rogers '40 the successful author of two novels and a novelette, gave the benefits of her experience to beginning writers in a three-weeks course at the Burnsville School of Fine Arts July 9-29.

Writing was one of five creative arts taught in the fully-accredited summer school operated by the Woman's College. Classes in art, drama and music ran the entire six weeks, and a course in dance was given the final three weeks, July 30-Aug. 19.

Mrs. Rogers is currently working on her third novel, in addition to her regular teaching duties as assistant professor of English at the Woman's College. Her first book, "South of Heaven," was published in 1946, and also ran in condensed form in the Ladies Home Journal. It was later reprinted in "Onward," a magazine in India, at the request of the State Department, in the interest of furthering international understanding.

Her second book, "The Storm Cloud", came out in 1951, also published by Random House. It is being translated into French for a French book club selection this year. Both novels have been published in England after meeting success in this country.

Although her two first books were set in China, where Mrs. Rogers was born as the daughter of Baptist missionaries, her current work is located in contemporary U.S.A.

Shifting from novels to a novelette, Mrs. Rogers wrote "His Mother Went to Heaven," for McCall's Magazine. That work received the highest reader-rating of any long story in any woman's magazine during 1950.

At Burnsville Mrs. Rogers worked with her students on a personal basis, helping them develop in any field of writing, poetry, short story or novel.

YOKO ESCAPED AMERICAN BOMBS TO STUDY AT WOMAN'S COLLEGE

by Marilyn Robinette '52

During the grim last days of the war, air attacks on the Japanese mainland were heavy. On a hot August morning in 1946 the drone of planes above the countryside near Ohtsuki village grew louder, and appearing suddenly overhead, loosed seven black bombs which fell down into the main buildings of the campus of Tsuru Girls' High School, perhaps mistaken for a nearby munitions factory. Though twenty of her classmates were killed that morning, Yoko Ishikawa, then only thirteen, was not.

Five years later, a former Chapel Hill resident, Mrs. Elizabeth Gray Vining, in hours off from her official position as tutor to the Crown Prince of Japan, lectured one afternoon a week to a class in English literature at Tsuda College in Tokyo. Yoko, a senior there, had a front-row seat and listened with great interest.

In the noonday mail last June, a letter postmarked Japanese Ministry of Education came to the Ishikawa home in Tokyo, and, opening it, Yoko learned that through the U.S. Department of State, Fullbright Scholarships, and the Service League of the Woman's College of U.N.C. in Greensboro, she was going to America to study for a year.

Until then, the small, darkhaired English major had never heard of the Woman's College, nor of Greensboro. Today the campus and Yoko share a new-found interest in each other. And Yoko is registered officially as a special student taking courses in English and child psychology, both of which she hopes to put to use as an English teacher when she returns home next year.

The Western world is not entirely new to Yoko. When she arrived by plane—in New York last August to begin a five-week orientation program at Bard College especially designed by the State Department for a group of its exchange students and "Ambassadors Extraordinaire" it was Yoko's second trip to this country. But she could remember nothing of the first one, for when she was only four, her father, an agent for Mitsubishi, at that time the largest Japanese export-import company, was transferred from New York where they had lived for a time, to London. Yoko and her mother—and older brother remaining in Tokyo to finish school and begin his course as a medical student—accompanied him for a four-year stay there. A year before Pearl Harbor, the Ishikawas returned to Japan, where they spent the war years.

Though Yoko puts in a busy day on the W.C. campus between classes, meetings and the library, she is quick, in her own shy way of attracting people, to gather bits of information on Americans, which is her method of self-styled orientation to the new—and exceedingly different—life here. But in the evenings after supper, the girls in Shaw Hall, heading for the usual short bull session before books, seem to inevitably gather in Yoko's room with questions of their own about the way of life she left behind. Yoko always begins with "OH, you see, it's so different . . .", and then launches into her descriptions and explanations of Japanese customs—religion, society, etc. Of keenest interest to date: the Japanese ritual of betrothal and marriage. And, too, there have been many comparisons of what the girls—and Yoko remember about the war years.

So it happens that often books are forsaken for a lesson in the theory that though custom may vary, people and problems and feelings are much the same the world over. And, intrigued by it, college mates sometimes keep that soft Japanese voice with the British accent going far into the night.

(I know. I'm her roommate.)

ELLEN GRIFFIN WRITES GOLF TEXT

by IRWIN SMALLWOOD
Greensboro Daily News Sports Writer

ELLEN GRIFFIN—GOLFING AUTHOR

Women's physical education is relatively new as a universal part of higher education. It's something that has grown, sometimes rapidly, in the past few years. There have been many obstacles to overcome. And Greensboro is blessed with one of the three or four top women physical education departments in the nation.

This is at Woman's College, and W. C. has reached its lofty place among the nation's women's physical education schools for one reason and one reason only—plenty of work on the part of its faculty.

Those responsible number many, but one of those who must be singled out for outstanding contributions is Ellen Griffin, who might very easily be called Greensboro's No. 1 sports personality from the feminine angle.

You have never heard of Ellen Griffin for accomplishments in competitive women's sports. And there's a reason. At an early age she decided that a teaching life was for her. And she's followed through in chosen profession with astounding success.

WROTE TEXTBOOK

At W. C., golf is Ellen Griffin's chief responsibility. And for those who might doubt her national rank among women's golf instructors, the textbook issued for golf makes it quite clear. The book is entitled "Golf Manual For Teachers," and in big type across the bottom it reads "Hicks and Griffin." That's the authors' names, and in case you haven't guessed already, "Griffin" is the same Ellen Griffin.

This book Ellen wrote with Betty Hicks, one of the nation's foremost women golfers, is really Ellen's outstanding contribution to women's physical education in general and Woman's College physical education in particular. This despite the fact that it was through her untiring efforts that W. C. was successful in securing the women's National Intercollegiate golf tourney for Greensboro in 1953.

Ellen modestly gives all the credit to Miss Hicks. But, as Miss Ethel Martus (Woman's College physical education boss) will tell you, Ellen did her share and more toward compiling the outstanding textbook—which is considered THE text for group golf teaching among women.

The idea for the book originated with Ellen and Miss Hicks in the mid-1940's, when they worked together in a big golf clinic at Purdue University. They recognized that there was no such text available in the United States, then put their shoulders to the wheel to produce it.

TEACHES FUNDAMENTALS

In W. C. golf teaching, Ellen concerns herself principally with girls who have never played golf before. Around 400 every year take her course, which teaches the basic fundamentals and creates the initial interest in the game. This is not to say she has not helped some real fine golfers along the way. Her former pupils include Greensboro's Marjorie Burns, and also Mt. Airy's Frankie Fowler, Rocky Mount's Nancy Maples and others.

Just who is Ellen Griffin? A transplanted Yankee, she was graduated from Durham High in '36, finished W. C. in '40, got her M.A. from Carolina in '43, has been on the physical education staff at Woman's College ever since. And she's a sportswoman from beginning to end. "There's not a single sport I don't like," she vows. And she says this is largely responsible for the fact that she never tried for any honors in competitive sports. "I just liked them all too well to concentrate on any single one," she says.

Don't take her too seriously and try to beat her on the golf course though. Her modest temperament is likely to fool you. Even though she plays very seldom, she can still go out there and shoot in the 80's.

Mary Kapp '30 Listed Among "Men of Science"

Following is an article published in the June 22 edition of the Richmond Times-Dispatch's "Women in the News"

Don't be fooled by that shy-looking, soft spoken woman in the gingham dress with an apron over it.

She's a worker in "she clothing," Mary E. Kapp, who by quiet stealth in hours while men were sleeping, has moved upward in a field still predominantly theirs.

What has she done? She has broken precedent in becoming the first woman chairman of the Virginia Section, American Chemical Society.

However, achieving that honor was just one more notch along the trail for this woman, who just before World War II was told, when she applied for a job as a chemist in industry, "We wouldn't touch a woman with a 40-foot pole."

Only a short time ago she was appointed chairman of the School of Applied Science at Richmond Professional Institute, and in its basement laboratory or classrooms you will find her this summer, working away, seemingly unaware of the heat.

She can claim a part of a textbook now in use, for which she is credited in the preface, and she has the title of "doctor", which she dislikes, in her extreme modesty, having applied to her name.

She even got that job in industry. During the war she resigned as assistant professor of chemistry at the Richmond Professional Institute to become assistant chief chemist in the rayon control laboratory of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., at Amptill.

She is listed in "American Men of Science," the "Chemical Who's Who" and "Who's Who in Education."

She has held the offices of secretary, chairman of the membership committee, vice-chairman in charge of publicity and vice-chairman in charge of program planning in the Virginia ASC since 1943.

Where did she come from? Mt. Airy, N. C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Kapp.

How did she start? "Well, I didn't have a chemistry set when I was a child," she said. She didn't even intend to be a teaching chemist, at first. She went into the field of mathematics and taught before she did graduate work in chemistry. It was at the now defunct Blackstone College that she had to teach chemistry without much training that she decided to concentrate on that subject.

Miss Kapp received her bachelor of arts degree from the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, her master of arts from Duke University, and her Ph.D. degree from the University of North Carolina.

She came to Richmond in 1940 from New Orleans, where she had taught at the Sophia Newcomb College in the chemistry department for a year. Her first job at RPI was head of the chemistry department for two years. Then she went with du Pont for four years, returning to RPI and her former post after the war.

Moved up in May to her present post replacing Dr. Doris Fales, who resigned, she is now responsible for general supervision of the departments of chemical technology, laboratory technique, biological technology, physical therapy, and nursing education. She also advises the students in these fields. All of the departments lead to bachelor of science degrees in applied science and the students are training to be—among other things—chemical analysts, scientific apparatus salesmen, professional physical therapists, medical technologists and for administrative posts in the field of nursing.

Sounds like a steady diet of hard work and no play, doesn't it? "Some people would think I lead a very dull life. I don't. I enjoy everything," said Mary Kapp.

Although she lives by bells when she's on the job, she follows no schedule at all away from the school and "I don't let work at home interfere with my pleasure."

She likes to hike along wooded trails, she likes to attend plays and concerts, to take drives, and to entertain friends. She likes to cook special dishes for friends at her apartment at 915 Park Ave. There, too, she likes to listen to classical records, to read mystery and science stories. She also likes travel.

"I love teaching and I love people," she said. "I also like having a home of my own."

Part of her enjoyment of life may be due to a pet saying she quotes to the students sometimes: "Don't worry about the things you can't help because you can't do anything about them. Don't worry about the things you can help because you will do something about them."

Young Artists' Exhibit Something New at Burnsville

Something new was added to the Burnsville School of Fine Arts this year—an invitational exhibit of work by outstanding young artists of the South-east.

The school, operated by the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, this year added another tourist attraction to its arts program, supplementing the weekly dramatic productions at the Parkway Playhouse.

Twenty-two artists under 30 years of age sent one or two of their current paintings, to hang in the Burnsville High School from July 12 through August 16.

Six states were represented, North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, and Texas.

From North Carolina were half a dozen artists: Miss Wilma King '50, Mrs. Charlotte Pope, Miss Ann Chipley '50 and Miss Martyvonne Dehoney '50, all of Greensboro, Miss Anne Wall '50 of Charlotte, and Raiford Porter of Winston-Salem '53 (now en route to India where he will study art under a Fulbright award).

The two Virginia artists represented were Mr. and Mrs. William Bevilacqua of Richmond. From Florida were two members of the faculty of the University of Florida, Edward Anderson and Harrison Covington, and two graduate students, Richard Neidhardt and Harvey Colling, both of the University center, Gainesville. Covington won first place in the Florida Federation Exhibition this year, and Mr. Anderson has exhibited in New York.

Although two of the artists were listed from Iowa, they were native Tennesseans who are finishing master's degrees at the University of Iowa, Robert Birdwell and Charles Mussett. Two other Tennesseans were Arlene Goff of Knoxville and Don Murray, a student who has just been graduated from the University of Tenn.

Three Georgia institutions were represented: LaGrange College, by Miss Reaunette Everett, winner in the national Pepsi-Cola contest a couple of years ago; Atlanta Art Institute, by Jarvin L. Parks; and the University of Georgia, by Leonard DeLonga, who was a former football player at the University of Miami.

From Baton Rouge, La., were two young men, Burnice Myrick and David Ledoux; and from Texas Wesleyan College in Fort Worth came the work of a young faculty member, Miss Mackie Trotter.

The exhibit was arranged by Gregory Ivy, head of the art department at Woman's College and director of the School of Fine Arts, on accredited summer term of the Woman's College, offering courses in art, drama, music, writing and dance.

Gastonia Woman of the Week

Mary Clare (Stokes) Sanders

The August 2 edition of the Gastonia, N. C., Gazette saluted Mrs. Julius (Mary Clare Stokes '36) Sanders as the Gastonia "Woman of the Week."

Bill Williams of The Gazette paid tribute to her in the following feature:

Mary Clare Stokes was born in Abbeville, Ala., but moved with her family to Wilson when she was only two years old. She finished the Charles L. Coon High School there and was voted the most outstanding student in her graduating class. This trophy signified her athletic prowess, her leadership, and her scholarship. She had played basketball on every team during her four years in high school, and had even participated in a bit of rough-and-tumble football down in the elementary grades.

In 1932, after graduating from high school, she attended the debutante ball in Raleigh and went on to Woman's College in Greensboro. There she majored in French and minored in English, graduating with an A.B. degree.

During her school days, she was president of the freshman class, marshal during her junior year, house president junior year, president of the Adelpian Society, played soccer and basketball and was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity. She was voted one of the eight outstanding girls in the graduating class and was in the May court her senior year. That was in 1936.

During that same year, W. P. Grier, the superintendent of the schools here, went to Woman's College to interview several of the prospective teachers for jobs. She liked his offer, so she and several others came to Gastonia to teach.

She jumped right into schoolwork by teaching eighth-grade English at the high school. Three years later, she had resigned to become the wife of Julius Sanders.

Mrs. Sanders says that she doesn't remember the first time she met her husband, but that it must have been at Mrs. Cunningham's boarding house. That's where both of them took their meals, and it wasn't very long after she came here that they were seeing each other regularly. In 1939, they were married.

At that time, Mr. Sanders was with the Federal Trade Commission with his office in New York. After they were married, they went to New York to live, and it was while they were there that their first child, Mary Clare, was born. In 1944, the year they returned to Gastonia, Julius, Jr., their second child, was born. Mr. Sanders resumed his law practice here.

A year or two after coming back here, Mrs. Sanders became active in Central School PTA Work. In 1949 and 1950, she was president of that organization, having been vice-president the year before.

When the beautification program was inaugurated in Gastonia, she was named chairman of the south-western district. Under her direction, many eyesores have been eliminated and much progress has been made. One of the latest undertakings of this district is the planting of grass in a vacant, ugly lot at the intersection of York and Chester streets.

She is a member of the First Baptist Church and was head of the Girls' Auxiliary for one year before the last baby, Carolyn Elizabeth, five months old, came. She is a member of the newly organized Gaston Bar Association Auxiliary and of the Four-Season Garden Club. She has been affiliated with the Gastonia Women's Club and plans to return in the near future.

One of Mrs. Sanders' husband's projects, the school lunch fund, finds the lady of the house highly interested in it. She thinks that this is one of the most worthwhile projects now being carried on in the city and urges everyone who will to help out with it. At present, Mr. Sanders is handling the entire program almost single handedly.

First Foreign Student at Kyoto College is Woman's College Graduate

A Woman's College bachelor of fine arts graduate goes to Japan to work with the American Red Cross overseas and finds herself a curio in Japanese art classes.

Such was the experience of Louise Martin '48 who jumped from merchandising at Thalhimers in Richmond to hospital recreation in Kyoto.

Louise tells of her encounters in her own words:

"I resigned my job with Thalhimers Bros., Inc., in February of '51 to accept a job with the American Red Cross. My first assignment was at the Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland. And then I was reassigned to the Far Eastern Theatre and have been in Japan since June of '51.

"My first week in Japan while I was waiting for assignment in Tokyo seemed like 'Old Home Week.' I knew that Carolyn Pleasants '48 was somewhere in Japan. Before I finally talked to Carolyn I had seen Dot Watkins '47 and Mimi W. Belaires (Waldrup '48). And one of the nicest things about my station in Kyoto, Japan, was that Margaret Watson '33 was teaching school there. We often enjoyed travelling together and talking about W. C.

"My job with Red Cross is in Hospital Recreation and it is a real privilege to be able to work with American and U N troops over here.

"Aside from my hospital duties I have been studying Japanese Painting in one of Japan's best art schools, Kyoto City College of Fine Arts. They accepted me as their first foreign student in spite of the fact that I do not speak Japanese. The faculty and students have been wonderful to me even though there is only one teacher and one student who speaks English. I found that art students have a great deal to share and a great deal in common without speaking. But then I couldn't think of a better subject to study in a foreign school. I've been quite a curiosity there. This spring, however, a boy from Rhode Island School of Design came to the college to study textile design.

"It is my dream that some day W. C. might have an exchange student system that would cover Japan in order that other students would be able to study Japanese art first hand. So, I am interested in knowing whether there are any W. C. students studying abroad. They have been so wonderful to me that I would like to have one of them study art at W. C. They would find the labs over in McIver building very like the labs in our college here. And it wouldn't take them long to find their way down to the corner for coffee for our labs over here are very cold in the winter, having no heat, and we students often take off for a tea shop."

News from Local Alumnae Chapters . . .

Columbia, S. C.

The Richland County Chapter of Columbia alumnae had their final meeting of the year in the new home of Mrs. Heyward Singley (Carolyn Price '27) at 8 p.m. on May 13th.

Our guest for the evening was Mrs. Betty (Brown) Jester '31, Alumnae Secretary. Her informal discussion and movies of the college and personnel was thoroughly enjoyable.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. C. S. Ayres (Mary Lily Cate '29), Mrs. Harry Winders (Jean Kinsey '40), and Miss Emily Cate '26, and a social hour followed.

Alumnae attending were: Mrs. Singley, Mrs. Ayres, Mrs. Winders, Miss Cate, Mrs. J. R. Clark, Jr. (Serena Riser '43), Mrs. Edwin Greense, Jr. (Alice Fulton '32), Mrs. Oren Long (Lucille Sharpe '32), Mrs. Homer Mask (Margaret Herring '27), Mrs. Robert Matthews (Lee Sherrill '45), Mrs. W. C. McCall (Sara Anderson '31), Mrs. Guy Meares (Roberta Jordan '30), Mrs. J. K. Nelson (Kathryn Wallace '31), Mrs. J. D. Owen (Elizabeth Glascock '28), Mrs. A. L. Ruffin (Ernestine West '24), Mrs. Harold Sinclair (Mary Frances Sutton '45), Mrs. W. A. Smith (Lillian Miller '38).

Lillian (Miller) Smith '38
Secretary-Treasurer

District of Columbia Washington, D. C.

Billie (Howard) Dickinson '42 called the dinner meeting of the Washington, D. C., chapter of the Woman's College Alumnae Association to order May 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

She also introduced the dinner speaker, Miss Florence Worrell, Program Administrator in the Woman's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor. Miss Worrell is in charge of exchange persons program in the U. S. She spoke on the "Rediscovery of America", giving brief accounts of conversations with these foreign people.

Following the speech there was a business meeting. Mildred Moreland reported on an Alumnae bridge party held at Woodward & Lothrop.

Katherine (Price) Tiedeman '26 presented the slate of officers for the coming year, and they were elected. They are: Eloise (Cobb) Harris '33, Eleanor Rigney '50, and Oriana (McArthur) McKinnon '50. It was also suggested that these three officers have a consultant group of permanently available members, or a board of six instead of three to serve under the chairman. The three consultants are to be delegated at the chairman's discretion. It was also suggested that in subsequent years one member of the Executive Board would drop out, leaving one or two old members on the Board to steer it.

There was a brief discussion of appropriate meeting places and suggested additions to the roll.

In conclusion, Lillian (Pearson) Brinton '27 invited the membership to a picnic on her farm in Derewood, Maryland, and it was agreed that it would be held on June 21. Everyone was invited to bring their families.
